Again, Suppose Goods were sold at 13d. a Pound, what is the Price of the great Hundred Weight? Look in the sixth Column towards the Right Hand Side of the Table, and you will find 6l. 1s. 4d. the Price thereof. This Table being so plain and easy, we need not trouble the Reader with more Examples.

For every Farthing that one Pound costs, reckon 2s. 4d. and that is the Price of the great Hundred.

A Table of INTEREST at five per Cent.

Lo! here's a Trade, surpasseth all the Rest,
 No Change annoys the Lawyer's Interest;
 His Tongue buys Lands, builds Houses without Toil;
 The Pen's his Plough, the Parchment is his Soil:
 Him, Storms disturb not, nor Militia Bands;
 The Tree roots best that in the Weather stands.

Silent and sad, bald, hoary, wrinkle-faced,
Yet art thou first among the Planets placed;
And thirty Years thy leaden Coach doth run,
E'er it arrives where thy Career begun.
Thou rich, benign, ill chasing Jupiter
Art worthy next thy Father's Sickle bear.

Monthly Observations.

Leave Princes Affairs undescanted upon;
And tend to such Doings as stands thee upon.
Fear God, and offend not the Prince nor his Laws,
And keep thyself out of the magistrates claws.
As Interest or Usury playeth the Devil,
So fill back and fill belly biteth at Evil;
Put Dicing among them, and docking the Deil,
And by and by after of beggary Smell.
Once weekly remember thy Charges to cast;
Once monthly see how thy Expences may last:
If Quarter declareth too much to be spent;
For fear of ill Year, take advice for thy Rent.
Who orderly entreth his Payment in Book,
Shall orderly find them again if he look.
And he that intendeth but once for to pay,
Shall find this in doing the quietest Way.

Fair dainty Venus, whose free virtues mild,
With happy fruit, get all the world with child;
Whom wanton dalliance, dancing and delight,
Smiles witty wiles, youth, love, and beauty bright;
With soft blind Cupid's ever more consort,
Of lightsome day, opens and shuts the port.

Not much unlike, so Mercury the witty,
For ship, for shop-book, bar or court, or city :
Smooth orator, swift penman, sweet musician,
Rare artizan, deep reaching politician ;
Fortunate merchant, fine prince humour pleaser,
To end his course, takes near twelve months leasure.

For all the while his nimble winged heels
Dare little budge from Phebus's golden wheels,
And lastly Luna, thou cold Queen of night,
Regent of humours, parting months aright;
Chaste emperers to one, Endymion constant,
Constant in love, though in thy looks inconstant.

I'll over pass how sea doth ebb and flow,
As th' horned queen doth either shrink or grow ;
And that the more she fills her forked round,
The more the marrow doth in bones abound :
The blood in vains, the sap in plants the moisture,
And luscious meats in crevice, crab and oyster.

Monthly Observations.

Good husband preventing the frailness of some,
Takes part of God's benefits
as they do come ;
And leaveth to wife, and his children the rest,
Each one his own part, as he thinketh it best :
These lessons approved, if
wisely ye note,
May save and advantage ye,
many a groat ;
Which if ye can follow, as occasion is found,
Then every lesson may save ye a pound.

October Husbandry.

Now lay up thy barley land,
dry as ye can,
Whenever ye sow it, so look
for it then ;
Get daily aforehand, be never behind,
Least winter preventing, do
alter thy mind ;
Who layeth up fallow, too
soon or too wet,
With noiances many, doth
barley beset :

That oak and elm, and fir and elder cut,
Before the crescent have her corners shut;
Are never lasting for the builders turn,
In ship, or house, but rather fit to burn;
And also, that the sick while she is filling,
Feel sharper fits through all their members thriling.

So that this lamp alone approves what power's
Heav'n's tapers have, ev'n on these souls of ours;
Temp'ring, or troubling, as they be inclin'd,
Our mind and humours, and our mind
Through sympathy, which while the flesh we carry,
Our souls and bodies doth together marry.

The Use of the TABLE.

FIND your Month (wherein you desire to know at what Time the Pleiades come to South) on the left Side of the Table, and the Day of the Month on the Head; and in the Angle, or Place of Meeting, you have the true Time set over against every Month, for every Day.

As for Example.

On the 11th Day of January, the Seven Stars come to South at 58 min. past 7 at Night, and July 21, at 27 min. past 7 in the Morning.

Note, M stands for Morning; A for Afternoon; and where there is no Letter, it is the same with the last preceding, &c.

Note also, These following fixed Stars, viz.

		H.	M.
The Bull's Eye	} comes to S.	0	49	} after the Seven Stars
The great Dog		3	3
The Lion's Heart		6	23

Of the four Quarters of this Year 1767.

And, first, of the Winter Quarter,

THE Winter Quarter begins December 21, 1766, at 16 minutes past 6 in the afternoon; then the sun enters the first point of capricorn, and the earth into cancer.

The Spring Quarter,

TAKES its beginning on Friday the 20th day of March at 8 o'clock in the afternoon; then the sun enters the sign Aries.

The Summer Quarter,

Commenceth on Sunday the 21st day of June, at 2 minutes after 6 in the afternoon; the sun then at that time enters the sign Cancer, and the earth into the sign Capricorn.

P E A R S E, 1767.

The Autumnal Quarter,

Beginneth on Wednesday the 23d day of September, at 8 o'clock in the morning; the sun then enters the first point of Libra, and the earth into the sign Aries.

Of the Eclipses for this Year, 1767.

THERE will be but two eclipses this present year, viz. both of the great luminary the sun, and neither of them will be visible to the inhabitants of Great Britain. They will happen in the following manner:

The first will fall on Friday the 30th day of January, about 4 in the morning, and therefore cannot be visible here; but will be visible in some parts of the East Indies, if the clouds interpose not and the air be clear.

The second eclipse happens to fall on Saturday the 25th day of July, about sun-setting, yet it will not be seen here because of the moon's southern latitude; yet it may perhaps be seen in some parts of America, if the air be clear, and the clouds interpose not.

The Causes of Sun Eclipses.

THE eclipse of the sun is not properly an eclipse, though commonly so called; it being nothing else but the direct interposition of the body of the moon betwixt our sight and the sun; for the moon, being a dense, solid, and dark body, and not transparent, coming between the sun and the earth (which is always in a conjunction or at new moon) doth thereby hide more or less of the sun's shining body from our sight; but yet the sun is not eclipsed at every conjunction, but when it falleth in or near those interseptions called the head and tail of the Dragon. Neither can the eclipse of the sun be universal, as that of the moon is, but may appear, in one climate, a greater eclipse, in another, it may be lesser, and, in other some, no eclipse at all, and that at the same instant; and the reason is, that the sun so far exceedeth the earth, and the earth the moon in bigness, that the cone of the moon's shadow cannot take away or hide the whole body of the sun from all parts of the earth; but one part only shall observe the same to be total, or of like like quantity; hence it may appear that the sun loseth no light, i. e. but only we are deprived of the same light, by the interposition of the moon's dark body. The greatest eclipse, or total eclipse of the sun is when the moon happens to be in the ecliptic at the moment of her change.

Of the WINDS.

DAILY experience sheweth, that the disposition of the air is much varied by the situation of the winds; for according to their different bearing, is the season much inclined, sometimes to wind, rain, and snow, and again to fair weather. Wherefore I shall first give you the names of the several winds, with their natures; and shall afterwards shew how to presage what winds will be predominant at all times. And, first, what the wind is.

The wind is nothing but an exhalation or earthly humour passing over the superficies of the earth; or it is an elisian or drawing forth of the air out of a cold region.

The four principal, or cardinal winds, coming from the four angles of the world, east, west, north, and south, are of the Latins called septentrio, auster, favonius, and subsolanus.

Septentrio, or the north wind, is cold and dry, bringing serenity; and is very wholesome, preserving all things from corruption. Albeit, for its excessive coldness, it is hurtful and pernicious to flowers and to young and tender plants.

Auster, the south wind, is warm and moist, sultry, hurtful, dangerous; hurteth the sight, stuffs the head, and makes men slothful; ingenders diseases, putrid fevers, plurifies, inflammations of the lungs; and, when this wind produceth serenity, it is with great heat, and hurtful to mankind.

Favonius the west wind (called zephyrus) is moist and watery, begetting rain and thunder; but in summer fair weather; in winter and spring, snow and rain.

Subsolanus Eurus, the east wind, is temperate, dry, and wholesome, an enemy to contagion and rottenness, and preserver of bodily health. This wind produceth rheums and cold dews; it blows most commonly at sun rising, and for the most part a little in the night time.

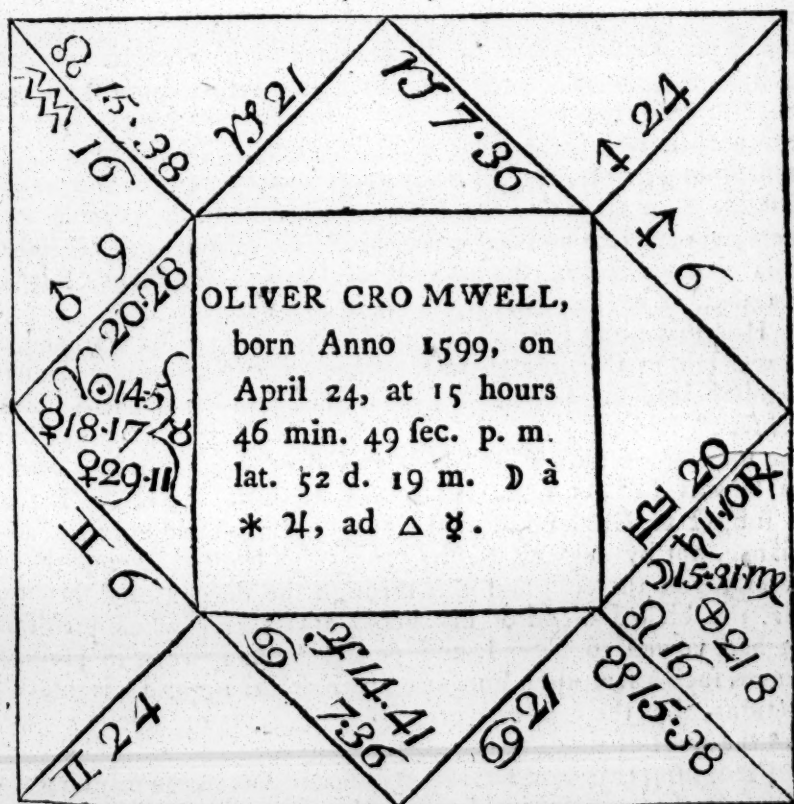

These four are called venti principales, the chief winds. The intermediate winds between these are called, borropeliotes, notopseliotes, notolybicus, and Borrholybicus, namely: north-east, south-east, north-west, south-west.

PEARSE, 1767.

The Nativity of OLIVER CROMWELL, artificially and historically considered.

Oliver Cromwell was born at Huntingdon, in England, on St. Mark's day, at 46 min. 49 sec. past three of the clock in the morning, 1599, after our vulgar way of reckoning; but astronomically on April 24, 15 hour, 46 min. 49 sec. post meridiem. The heavens then being as followeth:

278. 19.

IN this geniture we find the regal sign ♄ ascending on the eastern fignitor, as a most certain note of this prodigious native's desire of sovereignty and rule, and of the tyranny he used when he ruled, it being the delight of ♄, and exaltation of the sun; next, we find the three superior planets essentially dignified, and the other four in a friendly trine of each other and both the luminaries, and the greater fortune in sextile; which eminent and remarkable testimonies most plainly argued the greatness and miraculous culous honours and achievements of this notorious person. And, if these arguments be but duly and seriously considered, the actions and attempts of this native need not amaze or amuse any one; he being from his birth ordained for prodigious and mighty attempts in general, and to be a scourge to England in particular. And indeed whoever he be that hath $\hbar$ in $\triangle$, in opposition to δ in ∇ , he may, it is true, be feared by England but never loved; and, let his pretences be what they will, his actions must prove destructive to it. But this obiter astrologers tell us—Fœlicissima erit genesis, in quatuor planetæ fuerint in suis domibus aut exaltationibus, &c. “That cannot but be a most happy nativity, in which three of the planets (much more the three superior planets) are found either in their own houses or exaltations, vid. Astrolo. Aphorist. p. 305. In this nativity, this aphorism is most exactly verified; and, in truth his nativity was most happy to himself, though destructive to many others. It is a general rule also among artists, that in what geniture soever cardinal signs possess the four angles of the figure, the native is egregiously eminent, and violent and tyrannical in all his actions. The truth of this was verified in the nativity of Carolus Gustavus, King of Sweden, as well and as largely as in this native’s.

Had this great spirited person, for such an one he was, and, as it was said of D’Amboise in the tragedy, “Nature had breathed a mind into his entrails to swell into another great Augustus Cæsar!” had he, I say, been any thing but English, he had been the most accomplished and to be admired person in the world! as he was, he lived not only the wonder but terror of it. But for a subject of England, so born and sworn to obedience and allegiance, not by degrees, but by prodigious leaps to attempt the sovereign rule thereof; and this through the deepest of difficulties, viz. the blessed blood of his sacred Sovereign; whose privileges he had vowed to defend, and person he had sworn to preserve, leaves such a fear upon him and his most daring and adventurous actions, that the canker worm σ —will never be able to eat out, nor the moss of time, of quantity sufficient to cover.

Presuming that divers artists will be curious in the scanning and perusing of this geniture, I shall, for their assistance, and prevention of trouble, present them with a catalogue of several accidents of his life, and the directions &c. that were (in the astrological sense) the proper occasioners of them; and, with no small pains to me, they are these following:

I. In the year 1640, this native (in hopes he would have proved honest than he did) was by his country elected a Member of that terrible long Parliament, and this was his first visible step to honour and preferment; and the directions that occasioned this was the Medium Coeli ad Caput Draconis. He had then also a good

good revolution, and $\mathcal{U}$ (though but weak) was then upon the mid-heaven of his radix.

In the year 1642, being adjudged by the rebels a fit villain to sink the oath of allegiance, in opposing his Sovereign; he was made a Colonel of horse, having some short time before discovered his rebellious heart by raising a troop of horse, at his own charges, under the command of Col. Sir Philip Stapilton. The moon was then directed to Antares, or the Scorpion-heart, an eminent, martial, and jovial star.

In the year 1643, he was (for his whining, dissembling, and villainous zeal to the cause) elected Lieutenant-general to the Earl of Manchester; he now began to be a rebel in good earnest. The moon was then directed to the trine of Mars.

In the year 1644, this man quarrels with the Earl of Manchester, and the Earl, believing himself to be the better man, prefers diverse informations against his Lieutenant-general, in Parliament, but to no purpose, for Cromwell soon acquitted himself, and, in despite of the Earl's teeth, he would ride the fore-horse, and did. To occasion this trouble, he had $\mathcal{H}$ all that year upon his ascendent being in the radical place of Mars and his own opposite place; he had also then the ascendent directed to the terms of Mars.

In 1645, this prodigious man was made Lieutenant-general to Sir Thomas Fairfax; and now his trophies begin to spread apace. The moon was then directed to the sextile of $\mathcal{H}$, lord of the tenth house in his nativity; and under this direction, he at last routed Fairfax.

In the year 1648, he contends with the Parliament, and contested with the Levellers, by which means he underwent much disgrace. He also now laid the plot for the murder of the King, an eminent Lady hearing of which (as I have been credibly informed) went unto him, and desired him to forbear so vile an action, for the judgment's sake it might bring upon the kingdom, if not for the perjury himself might be guilty of, and the whole Parliament also; unto whom he angerly and like a tyrant said, "Madam, forbear to move me in this matter, for by the life of GOD he must die, and the world cannot save him. He had now the sun directed to the quartile of $\mathcal{H}$, and his part of fortune to the opposition of Venus.

In the year 1649, having done this villainy in England, and hearing of some matters that might prove impediments to him, and his desired sovereignty in Ireland, he in haste marches over thither to allay the fury of what that opposition portended. He was fortunate in that undertaking, more from his general than particular fate, yet he was sick in Ireland of a flux and fever. The moon being directed ad quartilium proprium, and a contranfection of $\mathcal{U}$. In the years 1650, and 1651, having been glutted with success success in England and Ireland, and his itch of Sovereignty still prevailing; being drunk with the same ambition as was Rollo Duke of Normandy, and in some sense a greater pride, who was always crying (as rendered by tragedian) 'A Crown, a Crown; O sacred Rule now fire me! He marched into Scotland to subdue all opposition there that endeavoured to confront his aims; and, having struck through the life of his Sovereign Lord King Charles the first, before, is resolved to ride thorough to his desired stage maugre all oppositions; and, at Worcester, now strikes at the life of his then present sacred Sovereign; but God preserved him from his infernal claws for England's future happiness. Howbeit Cromwell came off a bloody victor, having then the sun directed to his own sextile; and the revolutionary figures of those two years most singularly fortunate in all things, as to his own particular interest.

In the year 1653, this Saint in-grain (after many religious quackeries, cheats, villainies, and bloody actions, by him committed in the fear of God) he made himself the usurping protector of England, dissolved the Parliament, &c. It is observable that, when he came to turn out his Masters, the Rumpers, such was his then hatred to superstition, that he cried out at the sight of the Speaker's mace, 'Away with this idolatrous bauble;' yet afterwards held it no vanity to have three such carried before his tyranny. He had then the sun directed to the body of ♈, and to the sextile of the moon; and the part of Fortune to the sextile of Venus. I need not tell you how this made use of the basest of instruments in the best of profession, to uphold this his usurped dominion, viz. both in law, divinity, and astrology, allowing them liberal pensions for their services performed on his behalf. In the year 1654, the better to fix him in his chair of usurpation, as if he had been a lawful King indeed, he concludes a peace with France, by the means of Cardinal Mazarine, and patches up a league with Sweden, by the pains of Mr. Whitlock, a lawyer, afterwards one of his Lords, whom he sent Ambassador to Sweden. The part of fortune was now directed to trinum martis.

In the year 1656, being jealous he was not fast enough rivetted in this his usurped power, he calls a counterfeit Parliament to confirm him in the same; and by his convention, he was solicited to have taken upon him in name, what before he had boldly assumed in substance, viz. the title of King, but he refused; so they confirmed him in Westminster hall, but what he was before, an usurping protector. Fortune was now directed to the sextile of ♈, Lord of the tenth, a good revolution,

In the year 1657, this politic native, intending to grasp as much as he could, and, hoping to make the country of Flanders partake of his pious parts, he sends a blessed bird of his own hatch-hatching, over thither, viz. Sir John Reynolds, with six thousand men; and this valiant person takes Dunkirk from the Spaniards; but Sir John, knowing his friend Oliver's wiles, was unwilling to undertake this weighty affair, untill he had been advised by Lilly what success he should have, and therefore gives him his nativity to direct him by. But Lilly, being Sir John's Master's creature, viz. Oliver's, would never predict any thing contrary to his blessed patron's undertaking; and so deals by Sir John, as in the Swedish business, he did by Sir G. A. one lost his life, the other his honour. Howbeit Oliver's designs went on somewhat the better for his parasite's knavery. For he had now the Sun directed to a sextile of ♀; a fit time to advantage himself by Traitors and trepanners.

In the year 1658, upon the third day of September, this troubler of England died at White-hall, in London. This was a day remarkable with him, which it pleased God to put a period to his tyrannies, which he did by a strange and prodigious storm of wind, the like hath seldom been known. But he, whose head and heart were full of the tempest of tyranny, murder, dissimulation, perjury, &c. in his life-time, it could not be expected but Nature should give a groan to be delivered from him at the last. The ascendent (which is Hylech or giver of life in this nativity) was then directed to the quartile of the cruel planet Mars in Cancer, his fall, and this in the fourth house of his radix, viz. the end of all things. Which malicious direction being attended on the part of fortune to the square of the moon, and all these concomitant with a most strange and remarkable return of the three superior planets (but a little before) to their true radical places, were arguments both eminent and sufficient of the death of this (to England) prodigious native in that year.

The Sun, making his Entrance into the four Cardinal Signs, shews the Commencement of the four annual Seasons of this Year, 1767.

Of the Winter Quarter.

AND this begins always when the sun enters Capricorn, which, because of its anticipating the beginning of the astronomical year) takes its beginning now December the 21st day at eight hours 27 minutes p. m. of afternoon, 1766, at which time 23° is on the mid-heaven, and ♀ 25, rises on the eastern horizon.

Of PEARSE, 1767.

Of Spring Quarter.

THE delightful Spring initiateth on Friday the 20th of March at eight hours p. m. then the glorious lamp of heaven, the sun enters into the celestial sign Aries.

Of Summer Quarter.

IT beginneth when the earth has inclined southward toward the sun, which happens this year on Sunday the 21st day of June, at 6 o'clock in the afternoon; then the sun enters the watery sign Cancer.

Of Autumnal Quarter.

THIS Quarter commences this year, on Wednesday the 23rd day of September, near 8 o'clock in the morning; at which time the sun enters the celestial sign Libra.
